

Career Exploration Seminar 2 - HRM with HK Institute of Human Resource Management

Dear Students,

Nowadays, the role of Human Resources (HR) has become a more and more important profession in the business environment. It is now recognized as an essential role in developing and executing organizational strategy. The scope of HR services has been expanding beyond simply recruitment, payroll, benefits, compensation, etc. Following the trend that many corporations treasure their personnel as their "human capital", it is the job of HR to provide them with learning and development opportunities by means of continuous, quality training and mentoring programmes, etc and to monitor and uphold their performance by effective performance management approaches. In cases of company restructuring, HR will even take up the role of planning and implementing related change management tasks.

Sound challenging? You may have many questions in mind... ..

"Is an HRM concentration necessary for me to become a HR professional?"
